EVERLASTING LIFE

SUBJECT OF DR. TALMAGE'S LATEST SERMON.

There Is No Rest for the Weary in This World-"Arise, Ye, and Depart, for Micah 2 : X.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 26.—Rev. Dr. Talmage, who is now in Australia on his globe girdling tour, has selected as the subject of his sermon for to-day, through the press, the words, "Everlasting Life," the text being from Micsh 2: x: "Arise ve and depart, for this is not your rest"

This was the drum-beat of a prophet who wanted to arouse his people from their oppressed and sinful condition; but it may just as properly be uttered now as then. Bells, by long exposure and much ringing, lose their clearness of tone; but this rousing bell of the gospel strikes in as clear a tone as when it first rang on the air.

As far as I can see, your great want and mine is rest. From the time we annoyances take after us. We may have our holidays, and our seasons of recreation and quiet, but where is the man come to mid-life who has found entire rest? The fact is that God did not make this world to rest in. A ship might as well go down off Cape Hatteras to find smooth water as a man in this world to find quiet. From the way that God has strewn the thorns, and hung the clouds, and sharpened the tusks; from the colds that distress us, and the heats that smite us, and the pleurisies that stab us, and the fevera that consume us, I know that he did not make this world as a place to loiter in. God does everything successfully; and this world would be a very different world if it were intended for us to lounge in. It does right well for a few hours. Indeed, it is magnificent! Nothing but finite wisdom and goodness could have mixed this beverage of water, or hung up these brackets of stars, or trained these voices of rill, and bird, and ocean-so that God has but to lift his hand, and the whole world breaks forth into orchestra. But, after all, it is only the splendors of a king's highway, over which we are to march on to sternal conquests.

You and I have seen men who tried to rest here. They builded themselves great stores. They gathered around them the patronage of merchant princes. The voice of their bid shook the money markets They had stock in the most successful railroads, and in "safety deposits" great rolls of government securities They had emblazoned carriages, high-mettled steeds footmen, plate that confounded lords and senators who sat at their table, tapestry on which floated the richest designs of foreign looms, splendor of canvas on the wall, exquisiteness of music rising among pedestals of bronze, and dropping. soft as light, on snow of sculpture. Here let them rest. Put back the embroidered curtain, and shake up the pillow of down Turn out the lights! It is 11 o'clock at night. Let slumber drop upon the eyelids, and the air float through the half-opened lattice drowsy with midsummer perfume. Stand back, all care, anxiety, and trouble! But no! they will not stand back. They rattle the lattice. They look under the canopy. With rough touch they startle his pulses. They cry out at 13 o'clock at night, "Awake, man! How can you sleep when things are so uncertain? What about those stocks? Hark to the tap of that fire bell; it is your district! How if you should die soon? Awake, man! Think of it! Who will get your property when you are gone? What will they do with it? Wake upl Riches sometimes take wings. How if you should get poor? Wake up!" Rising on one elbow, the man of fortune looks out into the darkness of the room, and wipes the dumpness from his forehead, and "Alesi For all this scene of wealth and magnificence-no rest." I passed down a street of a city with a merchant. He knew all the finest houses on the street. He said, There is something the matter in all these houses. In that one it is conjugal infelicity. In that one, a disfather. In that, an idiot child. In that, the prospect of bankruptcy." This world's wealth can give no per- up." manent satisfaction. This is not your

You and I have seen men try o another direction. A man says. 'If I could only rise to such and such a place of renown; if I could gain that office; if I could only get the stand and have my sentiments met with one good round of hand-clapping applause; if I could only write a book that would sound!" The tide turns in his favor. His name is on ten thousand lips. He is bowed to and sought after, and advanced. Men drink his health at great dinners. At his flery words the house tops, as he passes in long pro cession, they shake out the national standards. Here let him rest. It is 11 o'clock at night On pillow stuffed with a nation's praise let him lie down. Hush! all disturbant voices. throne, and across it march a corona tion. Hush! "Wake up!" saya s rough voice. "Political sentiment is changing. How if you should lose this place of honor? Wake up! The morning papers are to be full of de nunciation. Harken to the execrations of those who once caressed you. By to-morrow night there will be multitudes sneering at the words which last night you expected would be universally admired. How can you sleep when everything depends upon the past turn of the srea!

tragedy? Up, man! Off of this pillow!" The man, with his head yes bot from his last oration, starts up suddenly, looks out upon the night, but sees nothing except the flowers that he on his stand, or the scroll from which he read his speech, or the books from which he quoted his authorities, and goes to his desk to finish This Is Not Your Rest."-Text from his neglected correspondence, or topen an indignant line to some re porter, or sketch the plan for a public defense against the assaults of the people. Happy when he got his first lawyer's brief; exultant when he triumphed over his first political rival; yet, sitting on the very top of all this world offers of praise, he exclaims, "No rest! no rest!"

Now, for what have I said all this?

Just to prepare you for the text:

"Arise ye, and depart; for this is not your rest." I am going to make you a grand offer. Some of you remember that when gold was discovered in California large companies were made up and started off to get their fortune. To-day I want to make up a party for the Land of Gold. I hold in my hand deed from the proprietor of the estate, in which he offers to all who will join the company 10,000 shares of enter life a great many vexations and infinite value in a city whose streets are gold, whose harps are gold, whose crowns are gold. You have read of the Crusaders-how that many thousands of them went off to conquer the holy Sepulchre. I ask you to join a grander crusade-not for the purpose of conquering the sepulchre of a dead Christ, but for the purpose of reaching the throne of a living Jesus. When an army is to be made up, the recruiting officer examines the volunteers; he tests their eyesight; he sounds their lungs; he measures their stature; they must be just right or they are rejected. But there shall be no partiality in making up this army of Christ. Whatever your moral or physical stature, whatever your dissipations, whatever your crimes, whatever your weaknesses, I have a commission from the Lord Almighty to make up this regiment of redeemed souls, and 1 cry, "Arise ye, and depart; for this is not your rest." Many of you have lately joined this company, and my desire is that you may all join it. Why not? You know in your own hearts'experience that what I have said about this world is true-that it is no place to rest in. There are hundreds here weary-oh, how wearyweary with sin; weary with trouble; weary with bereavement Some of you have been pierced through and through. You carry the scars of a thousand conflicts, in which you have bled at every pore; and you sigh, "Oh, that I had the wings of a dove, that I might fly away and be at rest!" You have taken the cup of this world's pleasures and drunk it to the dregs, and still the thirst claws at your tongue and the fever strikes to your brain. You have chased Pleasure through every valley, by every stream, amid every brightness and under every shadow; but just at the moment when you were all ready to put your hand upon the rosy, laughing sylph of the wood, she turned upon you with the giare of a fiend and the eye of a satyr; her locks adders and her breath the chill damp of a grave. Out of Jesus Christ no rest. No voice to silence the storm. No light to kindle the darkness. No dry dock to repair the Oh ye whose locks are wet with the split bulwark dews of the night of grief; ye whose hearts are heavy, because those wellknown footsteps sound no more at the doorway, yonder is your rest! There is David triumphant; but once he bemoaned Absalom. There is Abraham enthroned; but once he wept for Sarah. There is Paul exultant: but he once sat with his feet in the stocks. There is Payson radiant with immortal health; but on earth he was always sick. No toil no tears, no partings. no strife, no agonizing cough, tonight. No storm to ruffle the crystal sea. No alarm to strike from the cathedral towers. No dirge throbbing from seraphic barps. No tremor in the everlasting song; but rest-perfect rest-unending rest. Into that rest how many of our loved ones have gone! The little childeen have been gathered up into the bosom of Christ. One of them went out of the aims of a widowed mother, following its father who died a few weeks before. In its last moment it seemed to see the departed father, for it said, looking upward with brightened countenance, "Papa, take me

Others put down the work of midlife, feeling they could hardly be spared from the office, or store, or shop, for a day, but are to be spared from it forever. Your mother went. Having lived a life of Christian consistency here, ever busy with kindness for her children, her heart full of that meek and quiet spirit that is in the sight of God of great price, suddenly live, or make a speech that would her countenance was transfigured, and thrill, or do an action that would re- the gate was opened, and she took her place amid that great cloud of witnesses that hover about the throne.

Glorious consolation! They are not dead. You can not make me believe they are dead. They have only moved multitudes huzzal From galleries of on With more love than that which beauty they throw garlands. From they greeted us on earth, they watch us from their high place and their high place, and their voices cheer us in our struggle for the sky. Hail, spirits blessed, now that ye have passed the flood and won the crown! With weary feet we press up the shin-In his dream let there be hoisted a ing way, until in everlasting reunion we shall meet again. Oh! won't it be grand when, our conflicts done and our partings over, we shall clasp hands, and cry out. "This is heaven!"

MEN WHO MOVE TRAINS. A Train Disputcher's Strike Would Postie

the Enflronds. During the troublous times when nearly all of the great rallway systems of the West were paralyzed by strikes, there was one class of railroad employes that never faltered at its post of duty. This was the train dispatchers. In the thickest of the fight, surrounded on all sides by strikers and riotous mobs, at many times in deadly peril, there was not so much as an intimation that any member of the craft once failed when called to his post. Had the dispatchers caught the strike fever the managers and super-intendents would have thrown up their hands in despair. Without them they would have been utterly helpless, but so long as the dispatchers remained loyal they could manage in some way to overcome all other obstacles and keep at least a part of their trains moving. It is the managers and other heads of the operating department of the railroads who, more than all others, appreciate the value and reliability of the dispatchers. The general public, even those who spend a good part of their lives on railroad trains, knows little about the duties of the dispatchers, but their employers know that there is no other class of employes burdened with such grave responsibilities. The lives of every passenger and millions of dollars. worth of property depend upon their watchfulness and accuracy. With a single pressure of the band on the telegraph key, resulting in the transmission of a wrong telegraphic character, they might hurl to destruction a trainload of passengers or send two swift-moving trains crashing into each other.

It is this knowledge of the responsibilities of the work that prompts railroad officia's to be very cautious in selecting their train dispatchers. Only men who have been fully tried and who are known to be intelligent, accurate and reliable are ever intrusted with the work. A man must be an expert telegrapher before he becomes eligible as a candidate, and he must have received a thorough training in railway station work before he is taken into the dispatcher's office as a helper. Once he is this far advanced along the scale of promotion he finds that it is but a short step toward the position he seeks, for the skilled operator and experienced station man must serve a long and exacting term of apprenticeship as a dispatcher's assistant before he is trusted with the work of ditpatching

A Ton of Leather Daily. "Would you believe it, sir," said a well-known Strand bootmaker the other day, "that some 3,000,000 of people walk about the streets of London daily, and in doing so wear away a ton of leather from their boots and shoes?"

"I- that really a fact?" "Really," was the emphatic reply. "And the amount would be greater if the streets were not so well paved and attended to. The ton of leather I have just spoken of would in a year form a leather strip one inch wide and long enough to extend from London to New York?" "And what would be its value?" "Well, estimating this great amount of disintegrated sole leather at 5d a pound, what It costs consumers, its value would be £100,000. If it could be recovered from the streets a fortune might result to somebody in the shoddy leather line. But, unfortunately, there seems no means of recovering all this valuable leather, and so no doubt it will always be swept up in the dust and dirt. But," be reflective y added, "if a process by which this leather can be separated from the dirt is discovered, the inventor would at once become a rich man."-London Million.

This Is Safe for Shoestrings. Though a shoestring is a very easy thing to tie, but one person in a hundred knows how to do it. We all know how to tie a how, and of what a bow consists-two loops and a knot in the middle. Now, suppose before you tighten your bow, and while you still bave a loop in each hand, you take the loop in your right hand and pass it through the knot in the middle. Now go your usual way, and give both loops a good hard tug to tighten them, and there you are! No

In your hand, give a good pull, and the thing is done, or, rather, undons. Had to Leave It Behind. An old lady who recently died at Stoke Fleming, near Dartmouth, with the key of her safe in her hand, and who lived a life of comparative seclusion, owned property worth $500,000. Her relatives have found
